Madison did a great job of switching to an online learning environment and keeping us engaged the whole semester by including current events into our understanding of media ethics and philosophy.
Professor Cavalchire was awesome!! Her course was professional and thought provoking. She was understanding of COVID-remote challenges and was also super prepared for the 8am class. I learned so much but Prof Cavalchire didn't make the course unnecessarily hard. I think Prof Cavalchire was one of my only professors this semester that I thought handled remote learning well!!! Props to her and a great class!!!!
I liked how she kept use updated & used a day by syllabus instead of sending 1000 emails.
This course helped me understand ethics in the media world SO WELL!
I never thought I would say I enjoyed media ethics, but I thought this class was great!
Professor Cavalchire led a very interesting and challenging course. She encouraged us to think out of the box and used great real-world examples to help push our thinking further. Our guest lectures were fascinating and applied directly to our course lessons. Professor Cavalchire offered us many resources and leniency during these difficult few months. I reached out to her when I was struggling and she was more than happy to meet with me during office hours and offered to help in any way possible. I would gladly take more courses taught by her. She was a great lecturer and role model.

She is great! Her experience as a journalist and student at UNC helped her to relate to us and add valuable stories to what we were learning. She has been positive through everything, even at 8am every day, and made sure that we were doing okay as well.

Madison is excellent and was always incredibly warm and welcoming even though we had one of the earliest classes at UNC, and even though we went through a format change. She's brilliant.
I really loved Prof Cavalchire's dedication to the class and students. She made a dry subject very interesting.
